

CASE STUDY

38 MICROSOFT BUSINESS PARTNERS GAIN ACTIONABLE INSIGHTS INTO SELLING CLOUD SOLUTIONS - ADD “WEBSITE” TO THEIR SALES STAT.

Mapping New Buyer buying behaviours online.

With the average Buyer doing 50-80% of their shopping research online, Microsoft understood some time ago that its websites are the new storefronts for selling software as a service.

Several years ago, Alinea Partners joined Microsoft on its journey to mapping its customers buying paths and experiences. A review of four Microsoft Office 365 in-country websites in local language delivered by Alinea Partners Associate experts helped Microsoft optimize its websites to reflect the modern selling process.

Alinea Partners has worked on various programs and initiatives with Microsoft since the company's inception in 2005. To date, 300 Microsoft partners have improved sales journeys and customer experiences.

Expanding the strategic selling program to websites.

Realising that its partner's websites could also use some support in evolving to part of the salesforce, Microsoft decided to offer the website review program to some of its European business partners.

Once again, Alinea Partners was charged with the mission of transforming websites into online selling systems.

Alinea Partners then participated in the Microsoft Next Generation Partner Seminar in Riga, Vilnius, and Monaco to present on Understanding Today's Buyer and The Value of Value Propositions.

This set the stage for why the website research was so valuable and to per partner discussions on specific changes they should make to improve Buyer opportunities on their websites.

This was followed by individual 2-3 hours workshops were hosted by Alinea Partners with other Microsoft business partners in Budapest, Prague and Warsaw to present the research results and actionable recommendations.
